

TIMOTHY R.B. JOHNSON, M.D.

Term: 2007

Timothy Johnson is Bates Professor and Chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Michigan. His education and training have been at the University of Michigan, University of Virginia and John Hopkins University. After service in the US Air Force from 1981 to 1985, he rejoined the John Hopkins faculty and rose to Director of Maternal Fetal Medicine.

Since 1993, Dr. Johnson has been Chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Michigan and has seen its national ranking reach into the "top ten" by NIH and USNWR metrics! He has served on several editorial boards and professional committees and boards. He has received research and training grants from NIH, DHHS and Carnegie Corporation. He remains active in teaching and training in Ghana, Africa. He is author of over two hundred articles and chapters.